

redburger.org – toolbar

Toolbar:

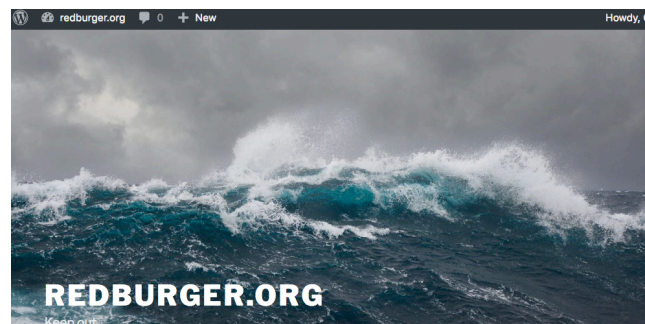

When you first login, you'll be redirected to the dashboard page. This will give you an overview of all the posts, along with some menu options on the left hand side. This is the dashboard view (remember: black menus on the left hand side of the page = dashboard). Once you are logged in all pages should have the toolbar at the top. The toolbar will let you switch between the website view and the dashboard view. You can also add new content to the site with the '+ New' button (button 4). To toggle between the dashboard view and the website view, click the redburger.org button in the toolbar (button 2).

Dashboard:

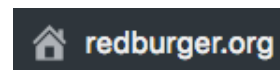

Website:

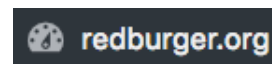

I recommend you stay in the website view to start with. You can look around in the dashboard, but for now just be comfortable switching between the two. The button will change depending on whether you're currently looking at the dashboard or the website.

The button will look like this if you are currently in the dashboard:
Clicking it will take you to the website

The button will look like this if you are currently in the website:
Clicking it will take you to the dashboard

To create a new post, click the + New button in the toolbar (button 4):

